Meet our Medical Director

Mary Nwoke, M.D.

Dr. Mary Nwoke is a board-certified Internal Medicine physician and founder of HomeCare Medicine of Atlanta (HCMA). Prior to starting HCMA, Dr. Nwoke completed her Internal Medicine residency at Morehouse School of Medicine in Atlanta, and she has worked as a hospitalist at several institutions within the metro Atlanta area and surrounding cities. She is currently a proud member of the Emory community and has been since 2014. She is also an active member of the American Academy of Homecare Medicine and is an incoming Fellow of the American College of Physicians.

Led by a passion for geriatrics and an unwavering commitment to patient advocacy, Dr. Nwoke launched HCMA, a home-based primary care practice serving the Atlanta metropolitan area. With “Humanism and Compassion in Medicine” as its guiding principle, HCMA quickly attracted partnerships from Grady Memorial Hospital, Emory

Healthcare, Coliseum Hospital to mention a few, and over 30 senior living communities.

A native of Silver Spring, Maryland, Dr. Nwoke lives in Atlanta with her husband Nnamdi and their son Jaxon. She enjoys spending time with her family, music, dancing, and serving as HCMA’s Medical Director.

“I believe very strongly that the medical community best serves its constituents only when that service springs from authentic, unadulterated humanism. It is then that true patient advocacy is born.”
